How Curious Are You?

I suppose most of us have heard this expression: "Curiosity killed the cat." I'm not really sure what that means, but I've heard it all my life. I think it has something to do with the idea that some things are better left alone.

I recently read another quote about curiosity that caught my attention. While not as famous as the one about the cat, it may be more important. "The call of Moses started with the curiosity of Moses." (Jesus in the Present Tense: The I Am Statements of Christ, by Warren Wiersbe, p.17) While Mr. Wiersbe and I would disagree on many things, I think he's right about that. The conversation with God began after Moses became curious about the fact that there was a bush that was burning, "...yet it was not consumed" (Ex. 3:2).

As I thought about this, I began thinking about some other instances in the Bible where curiosity led to something of great significance. I'm sure you can add to this list, but just a few examples would be:

- David's curiosity about engaging Goliath in battle; 1 Sam. 17:26ff.
- A question about the residence of Jesus; John 1:38ff
- A Samaritan woman's question about why Jesus was asking her for water; John 4:5ff.
- The same woman's question about the proper place for worship; John 4:20ff.
- A young man's question about what he might do to inherit eternal life; Matt. 19:16ff.
- The curiosity exhibited by those who didn't understand the unusual occurrences on the Day of Pentecost; Acts 2:7-12
- The question asked by those whose hearts had been affected by the sermon delivered by Peter and the other apostles on that occasion; Acts 2:37ff.

As suggested earlier, that list is not exhaustive. Many other examples could be given. Unfortunately, not all of them would be positive in nature. (Think of Eve and her curiosity about the fruit from a certain tree as one example.)

Can you think of some ways in which curiosity could lead today to things of eternal significance in a positive way? Maybe the following can be used as a springboard for your own thoughts:

- What could curiosity about the true facts about the origin of the universe lead to?
- What could curiosity about the "when does life begin" controversy lead to?
- What could curiosity about the church Jesus promised to build lead to (cf. Matt. 16:18)?
- What could curiosity about the Lord's plan of salvation lead to?
- What could curiosity about "the ultimate question" (where will I spend eternity) lead to?

What will curiosity lead to in your life? What are you curious about today?

Do We Mean What We Sing

My friend and brother, Tom Barton, made a shocking statement a few years ago at the Old Paths Men's Retreat. "More lies are told while singing than at any other time!" I wish he had been wrong, but if you think about it, you see he was right on target.

Tom was talking, of course, about Christians, not folks in the world. While worldlings may lie routinely about anything and everything, Christians at least try to be honest. But what about our singing? Do we mean what we sing?

Brother Barton's assigned topic was "We'll Work 'Til Jesus Comes." Will we? Really? Some of us can't drag ourselves to the assembly on anything like a regular basis; and Biblically, that's not even work! What are the odds that we're doing anything that could be styled even remotely as "work"?

But that's just one of many songs I ask whether we take seriously. "If Jesus Goes With Me, I'll Go Anywhere!" (As long as it's within a few miles of all the rest of my family; and as long as it's a place I like; and as long as . . ." [you get the picture]).

"Lead me to some soul today!" But I don't know my Bible well enough to teach that soul the gospel, so maybe that's not such a good idea.

"Make me a servant, Lord; make me like You!" But wait! People weren't always kind to You; sometimes You suffered greatly while serving. Maybe I don't want to be exactly like You!

"All to Jesus I surrender!" Well, I surrender a little bit, anyway. I'm not an extremist, you know!

If you don't mean it, don't sing it.

CHURCH OF BONES

A preacher once categorized his congregation into five types of bones: (1) Wishbones—folks wishing for better things, but not willing to work for them. (2) Jawbones. – gossiping kind that put others in turmoil. (3) Funny bones -touchy people who wear their feelings on their sleeves. (4) Drybones – true to faith but dead as fossils. (5) Backbones - those who are the spiritual support of the church and keep the body standing.

It's fine to wish for better things, but let's make an effort to bring them about by every means at our disposal.

There are some who need special help and attention to keep them faithful and active. By lending this help, we are rendering a great service to them and to ourselves. When we can strengthen someone, we become stronger in the process.

Finally, let us be patient, knowing that our efforts are not always rewarded with success. We dare not become weary in well doing (Galatians 6:9), and we need to pray to God to help us in our down times. John Wright
